DETAILED ACTION

Response to Amendment

1. Applicant's request for reconsideration of the finality of the rejection of the last Office action is persuasive and, therefore, the finality of that action is withdrawn.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

2. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

3. Claims 1-4, 14-15 and 33 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Crosby (US 4,857,020) in view of Goto (US 5,044,996).

Crosby discloses an electrical conductor splice connector [figure 1] comprising:

- a body having a general C-shaped cross section [26];
- conductor contacting wedges [40, 42] movably mounted on two wedges receiving areas of the body, wherein the receiving areas comprises open top sides [figure 1];

Crosby discloses the instant claimed invention as described above except for an anti-reverse clip connected to the body and being engaged with serrations formed in the wedges.

Art Unit: 2839

Goto discloses teaches a wedge connector [figure 1-2] comprising a lance integral formed in a body [42] read on applicant's an anti-reverse clip connected to the body and being engaged with serrations [28] formed in a wedge [12].

It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time invention was made to modify the connector of Crosby to provide the anti-reverse system including the clip and serrations as taught by Goto for the purpose of preventing the wedge(s) from backing out under the compressive forces building up in the conductor and the resilient outward displacement of both sides of the body, as is well known in the art of the electrical connectors.

4. Claims 11-13, 16-21, 25-32 and 34-37 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Crosby in view of Goto and further in view of Herron (US 6,193,565)

Crosby in view of Goto discloses the instant claimed invention as described above except for a locking mechanism between the first and second wedges.

Herron discloses an electrical conductor splice connector [10, figures 1-3C] comprising pair of opposing conductor contacting wedges [14 or 16], a first one of the wedges [14] comprises a cantilevered bar [60] slidably extends into a receiving area of a second one of the wedges for interlocking between the wedges [figure 1].

It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time invention was made to modify the connector of Crosby to provide the locking mechanism as taught by Herron for the purpose of facilitating the assembly of the connector.

The method steps are inherit in the product structure.
